Seeing the remnants of snow lingering in the parking serves as a reminder as to how quickly things change. Not many days ago, the area was covered with more than four inches of snow, and the inclement weather prevented students from traveling safely to and from school for a couple of days. Due to the changes in the educational experiences of the past few years, schools and school districts learned how to manage “remote learning” through platforms such as Zoom and Google classroom. The result is that no longer will snow and ice in January and February cause the school year to extend in- to early June.

A while back, HCA decided to utilize the Google Classroom platform to provide instruction and assignments on days when weather prevented students from participating in “in-person” learning. I appreciate the efforts that you made to ensure that work was completed on Thursday. I am also grateful that there was enough time built into the school calendar so that students could enjoy a “traditional” snow day on Friday without extending the school year any further. If you found it difficult to access the material on Google Classroom, please contact the teachers so that you will be prepared for the next time the weather prevents us from meeting in person.
